

ACTIONENDING WAR PROMISED NEXT SESSION

Joint Resolution Planned
Soon After the Coming Session Opens.

TO RE-SUBMIT TREATY

Senate Divided on Legality
Of Plan to End War
By Its Action.

Early action on the resolution declaring the state of war with Germany at an end was promised yesterday by Republican leaders of the Senate and House.

It is the purpose of Senator Lodge to bring the resolution to a vote in the Senate in the opening days of the next session, which begins Monday, December 1.

Before the resolution is reported to the Senate by the Foreign Relations Committee, however, it will be changed from a concurrent to a joint resolution, so that if passed it will require the signature of the President before becoming effective.

To Put It Up to Wilson.

When first proposed, the resolution was drafted as a concurrent resolution in order that Congress might declare the war at an end without any action by the President. But the sentiment now prevailing among Republican Senators is that it should be made a joint resolution so that the President might either sign it or accept the responsibility for the continuance of the war by giving it his veto.

In the meantime, it is expected that the treaty will be re-submitted to the Senate by the President either with suggested reservations or with a renewal of the request for ratification without reservation or amendment. The treaty will go again to the Foreign Relations Committee where it will be exactly the same as when it was first submitted.

It appears that the treaty is doomed to suffer a long delay before further steps can be taken toward effecting its ratification.

Will Demand Information.

A majority of the Foreign Relations Committee has given notice to Senator Lodge that they will not permit the treaty to be reported until they have been furnished with all the information which the committee heretofore requested and which the President declined to give.

There was considerable discussion yesterday among Senators as to the constitutionality of the proposed resolution to declare the war at an end. Administration Senators said Congress has no power to take such a step.

Opponents of the resolution felt that the resolution would be a back upon an opinion rendered several years ago by the then Attorney General to the effect that Congress, having the sole right to declare war, has an undoubted right to declare this war at an end.

The declaration against Germany was by a joint resolution, and constitutional authorities among the Senators are unable to understand why a similar resolution declaring the war ended would not be constitutional.

MINERS REJECT OPERATORS OFFER

amount to about 35 or 40 cents per ton when other elements of operation which would be affected were taken into consideration. On the basis of a production of 500,000 tons for this year, which was the estimate made Wednesday by Dr. Garfield, this increase would saddle $175,000,000 on the coal industry.

Consumer Must Bear Burden.

Asked if this increase in the cost would have to be borne by the consumer, the operators pointed out that Dr. Garfield's presentation of government data showed that the margin made by the operators was already too low to absorb any increase in cost of production.

The operators said that they had made the counter proposals to the miners because the government had demanded that they make the miners an offer so that the conference might result in a settlement of the dispute and the return of the men to work.

They said that the offer represented the "absolute limit" to which they could go.

A statement issued by the operators said in part:

"As the miners base their demands for more wages upon the increased cost of living since 1914, it is proper to state the percentage which the advance offered them together with other advances made since 1914 increases in total percentage the 1914 wages.

"On pick mining the aggregate will be 58.3 per cent.
"On machine mining 92.3 per cent.
"On day work from 98.7 per cent to 146 per cent.

"The increase in the cost of living since 1914 is figured by the International Industrial Conference at 20 per cent, and by the Department of Labor and the miners at a somewhat higher percentage. It will be seen that the advance offered is more than sufficient to compensate for the increased cost of living during the period mentioned."

Other Offers.

The other propositions made by the operators to the miners, and which were rejected, were:

To extend the present contract to March 31, 1920.

To restore a previous agreement, which was overlooked in the Washington agreement, whereby the operators would be permitted to sell coke, fuel, household coal and other mine supplies to the miners at not less than cost.

To make national organizations and national officials of the United Mine Workers of America responsible for the enforcement of contracts between miners and operators.

To provide a uniform, automatic penalty clause for illegal strikes in violation of contracts.

The operators said that the purpose of making the two-year contract end in March was to prevent strikes from being called in the late fall. They said they had, in the interest of harmony, waived the claim that the present contract should not expire until the war was legally ended.

Operators said last night that they have been furnished with all the information which the committee heretofore requested and which the President declined to give.

WILHELM FALLS BEFORE LAFAYETTE

METZ—Immediately upon the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France, its inhabitants proceeded to clean the place of all things German. The inhabitants of Metz tied a rope to the equestrian statue of Wilhelm I, grandfather of the former Kaiser, and pulled him off his pedestal. The Knights of Columbus have planned to erect a statue of Lafayette in its place.

WETS INSIST WAR PERIOD TERMINATED

treaty as first submitted and adjourned "sine die," said a brief filed yesterday by the attorneys for the National Association of Distillers and Wholesalers, "the coming of a technical peace, either by treaty or mere congressional investigation, is postponed, if not indefinitely, at least to an uncertain date in the future."

The arguments yesterday were on three cases, two appeals from decisions in New York favorable to the government and one from Louisville where the Kentucky Distillers and Warehouse Company obtained an injunction permitting it to withdraw its goods from bond or place them on the market. Following the Louisville decision whisky has been sold openly there.

Root Argues Case.

The New York courts rejected petitions for injunctions to restrain revenue officers from prohibiting the removal of distilled spirits from bond. The courts also held the wartime act and the Volstead enforcement law, in which one-half of one per cent is fixed as the alcoholic limit of beverages, to be constitutional.

Elihu Root represented Jacob Rupert, one of the petitioners in the New York cases, while Walter C. Noyes appeared for Dryfoos, Blum & Co., the other New York petitioner. Levy Mayer and William Marshall Bullitt, of Chicago, argued the liquor interests' side of the Louisville appeal.

Crowd at Court.

Solicitor General Alex. King and Assistant Attorney General William L. Frierson presented the government's case.

A crowd that occupied all available space in the court room sat throughout the arguments.

Under the procedure of the court, December 3 is the earliest date on which a decision can be rendered. It is more likely, though, that the decision will not come for a week or two after that date.

With constitutional prohibition becoming effective on January 16, it would appear that the "wets" will have not more than a month's respite in the event of a favorable verdict.
